HOUSING UNITS BY YEAR Source: US Census Bureau, 2010 Census Summary File As can be seen from the report, the number of houses and apartments in the US is the largest among the 50 largest industrialized nations combined. The United States is followed only by South Korea and Japan, followed by France. At the same time, a large-panel house is much more common in the United States than in Russia, Germany and Japan. The United States also has a higher percentage of houses built of wood than the USSR, but in the United States in recent years, after the fall in prices for raw materials, there has been a more widespread "village" housing, and in Japan and Germany, "homes for specialists" (and earlier "for the rich" prevailed).

2. IN A SERIES CULTURAL STRUCTURE The US population is still dependent on the church, writes the New York Times. It influences the choice of education system, education in many educational institutions is called "religious", and therefore not subject to payment. The change in America's geopolitical orientation in recent decades has sharpened interest in many problems that until recently seemed speculative and not requiring intervention from the outside. For example, the lack of understanding of who and why is blocking natural capital, limiting purchases of renewable energy and preventing the creation of reckless green cities near the equator. Or whether the dependence of the American economy on petroleum products, which the government claims, poses a real threat to those who want to develop alternative energy. And, most importantly, why at the same time, until today, the United States did not make fateful decisions that could affect the future of science and technology in general. Since 1950, that is, since the country gained independence, the US territories have gone through
